

You're at risk if you fail to check

Felling, pruning and shaping trees and large shrubs can be dangerous work.

Make sure the contractor you use is:

Fully insured

Fully trained

Fully protected

with appropriate work wear and safety equipment

Uses the right equipment

Works safely

Clears up afterwards

Removes all waste

and

Belongs to a recognised

Trade Association

You can find tree work contractors knocking on your door or in a telephone or local directory, but how do you know they are fully trained, qualified tree surgeons? Can you be sure they know how to care for your trees, remove unwanted growth safely, prune correctly and leave you with a neat and tidy garden?

Choose the wrong one and it's you who will probably have to do all the tidying up after they've gone, rectify bad workmanship and often pay for extra work to complete what you wanted.

Blythe Valley have the experience, skills and all the equipment needed for a safe and tidy job, with all tree works carried out in accordance with BS 3998:1989.

Look for the right accreditation

When choosing a tree surgery contractor, check for membership of, or approval by, relevant organisations, such as those below with which Blythe Valley is associated.

These bodies have registers of approved companies that meet the highest standards of working practice.

The Arboricultural Association examines its members to make sure they comply with strict safety and working standards before awarding "Approved Contractor" status.

ISO 9001 quality certification follows a rigorous audit to show compliance with consistent high standards from paperwork to job completion.

INVESTOR IN PEOPLE

Investors in people recognition is only awarded to a company that proves an excellence in training and advancing its personnel.

Constructionline and the Utilities Vendor Database are important trade registers used by public service and professional organisations.

If you want a job well done, choose wisely

There are many cheap ways of felling and pruning trees which, when they go wrong, cost you dearly. And may even put lives at risk.

Remember, if you choose a contractor who is uninsured or is not fully trained, you could end up paying for damage to your own and neighbours' property. Even one small wayward branch can make a big dent in someone's car, smash through a green house or ruin lawns and flower borders.

If they haven't the right skills, the right equipment and the right safety gear, you may end up paying more to clean up the mess - or even calling an ambulance if something goes seriously wrong.

Check carefully who you let into your garden.

Where will all that rubbish go?

If you don't know where your waste is going it could end up being fly tipped anywhere - perhaps just around the corner from you.

Blythe Valley has its own environmentally managed waste site and also operates a kerbside collect and chip service for your own prunings and green waste.

Chippings make a useful mulch or compost, which you can use yourself or we'll take away. Larger timbers from tree felling, height reducing or professional pruning are removed and turned into firewood. We even supply wood fuel for use in power stations.

Not only do we leave a clean and tidy site, we recycle everything we can for a better sustained environment.
